

Wanted: Summer Communications Intern for Sagamore Institute

Interns at Sagamore Institute don't make coffee; they work. In a fast-paced and fascinating think tank environment. On projects where their creativity and skills are valued and maximized. Around individuals who are tackling the most pressing public policy issues of our day, from education reform to the fiscal policy crisis to foreign aid in Africa.

The ideal candidate will possess the following:

- Excellent writing skills
- Experience with social media
- Some web-based experience
- Graphic design experience (not required, but a plus)
- Ability to work in a fast-paced environment
- Flexibility and ability to accomplish tasks within deadline
- Interest in public policy issues
- Curiosity and resourcefulness
- Character and integrity

Possible work assignments include (but are not limited to):

- Writing copy for website
- Design and production for monthly e-newsletter
- Graphic design
- Market research
- Social media
- Editing of copy, video, and audio

Interested applicants should email their resumé and three writing samples to Zoe Erler, Director of Communications, at zoe@sagamoreinstitute.org.

All internships with Sagamore Institute are unpaid.

Sagamore Institute is nonpartisan research group—or “think tank”—located in downtown Indianapolis. Learn more about Sagamore Institute by visiting sagamoreinstitute.org.